Why Aquila?

- Budgetary concerns
- Benefits of online journal
- Greater exposure
- Easy to manage

A Q U  L A

First Steps

- December 2014
 - First meeting with editors
- January – February 2015:
 - Building/designing site
- March – April 2015:
 - Training and customization using demo server
- April 27, 2015
 - GCR officially launches on Aquila

Teamwork!

- What's a Digital Commons consultant?
- What's a Digital Commons journal?
- How do Josh and I work together?

- A handy “reference librarian” for your IR.
- A hosted journal publishing platform.
- Partner to make the IR and journals excellent!

Working with GCR

- Coming in mid-stream
 - Journal had just launched on live site
 - Project wrapping up to display italics on the article information pages
- <http://aquila.usm.edu/gcr/vol28/iss1/1/>
- Time to make the journal look its best, meet all of the editors' needs

Meeting Specific Needs

- Customized submission form allows for automatic changes

<http://aquila.usm.edu/cgi/submit.cgi?context=gcr&edbypass=1>

- Reflect the title change (2000) in the cover pages

- Pre-2000:

<http://aquila.usm.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1010&context=gcr>

<http://aquila.usm.edu/gcr/vol2/iss2/1/>

- Post-2000:

The Power of Teamwork

Lauren

- Takes care of the nuts and bolts technical issues
 - Creating new collections
 - Resolving technical issues
 - Finding creative solutions

Josh

- Uploads content
 - Focuses on big picture goals
 - Promoting Aquila across campus
 - Recruiting new participants
 - Leading workshops and training sessions

The Power of Teamwork, continued

More people means more work gets done

- A support contact is almost like having an additional staff member for the IR
- Helps libraries do more with less, especially in lean budget years
- Reduces the level of technical expertise an IR manager needs to do their job
- Allows for more focus on emerging issues in academia and scholarly communication

Next Steps for Aquila

- Identifying new journals
 - Work with colleges and departments to identify other journals on campus that might be a good fit for Aquila
- GCR will serve as an example
 - Over 50-year publication history is valuable selling point for other journals
 - Excellent model of how the IR can be adapted to meet the needs of a journal's editor(s)
